

MACESS

Comparative European Social Studies

Add a European dimension to your career

Whether you are just about to get your bachelor's degree or have been in practice for a while, our Masters programme in Comparative European Social Studies (MACESS) will improve your career perspectives. It adds a European dimension to your career by offering advanced studies for those with a degree in a social profession or the social sciences from all over Europe.

MACESS is a truly European programme that is accredited by London Metropolitan University (UK) and Zuyd University of Applied Sciences (The Netherlands). It is taught in Maastricht (The Netherlands) by a teaching staff team that is drawn from a network of 37 different European universities. Students come from all over Europe and beyond. That way, rather than only teaching European issues, MACESS offers a truly European environment in which you can practice your cross-cultural skills by working together with other students and academic staff on a daily basis.

You will learn about European institutions, comparative social policy, comparative social research and social professional practice. Depending on your interests, you can further specialize in social research, management, advanced professional practice or social professional education. You will also be offered the opportunity to do social research that is European and / or comparative. The subject of your dissertation is up to you, so you can be sure to specialize in a field of your interest.

During the programme, you will visit the European Commission in Brussels and the Council of Europe in Strasbourg; you will live in Maastricht, with its big international student scene, vibrant nightlife, and only a few hours away from major cities like Paris, Brussels, Aachen, and Cologne. In other words: you will add a truly European dimension to your career.
