Building on the successful experience from the International Week 2019, the Faculty of Philosophy is pleased to announce a Call for the International week 2020 that will promote the exchange of ideas and critical discussions between students and professors related to the topic of: “Innovation in Humanities and Social Science”. The five day event will include lectures, presentations and facilitated discussions in which both professors and students will contribute.

We invite applications for lecturers and participants involved in teaching, research or just interested in new and innovative approaches in: philosophy, history, education and pedagogy, classical studies, history of art and archaeology, psychology, sociology, social policy and social work, special education and rehabilitation, security studies, gender studies and family studies. We particularly welcome specific research and lecture themes that represent distinct, novel and innovative contribution to scientific knowledge, that advance the research and teaching techniques and that connect scientific research with public engagement. Themes related to digital humanities, digital social sciences, and cross-disciplinary networking that improve knowledge in humanities and social sciences are also of vital interest.
